raigned before Justice Goetting in the Lee Avenue Court to-day on a charge of intoxication, and was sent to jail for ten days. Her companion, William Quinn, a saloon-keeper, of isi York street, did not appear and his bail bond was forfelted.

Last night the couple were observed walking along Kent avenue, near North Seventh street, the woman crying and expostulating, while Quinn seemed to be trying to make an explanation, At the corner of North Sixth street the woman, broke away and ran down to the river. Officer Shields captured her before she reached the water, and then arrested the two on a charge of intoxication.

Mrs. Garrison's husband, a young business man, called on her at the Ninetenth Precinct Station, but made no attempt to bail her out.

When Mrs. Garrison was sentenced she booke down and cried for over an hour. Evidently she did not expect any imprisonment, for she was smiling and gay when arraigned in court.
